

Docket No. COP-12II/CPI

Feb. 10 - 2001

Dear Commissioner Hennet:

We are extremely concerned about the multitude of genetically engineered foods in our supermarkets. It is unbelievable that these are still not labeled! Are American consumers regarded as less deserving to know what is in their food than their European counterparts? Are we to continue being guinea pigs for the bio-tech companies? Is our government so deeply in the pockets of these companies that this is allowed to continue even though perhaps 60% or more of the products sold here are either genetically modified or contain such ingredients? This is unacceptable!
The very least we American consumers are entitled to is labeling. We also demand safety testing of genetically modified foods!
It is simply common sense that this be done. There are simply too many unknowns to let the companies proceed without (greater) government oversight.

We are looking forward to your response. Safety testing must be done and labeling must become mandatory!

Sincerely
